City becomes member of “Green Building Council.”

The City of Colorado Springs has become a governmental member of the United States Green Building Council (USGBC). The membership underscores the City’s commitment to using environmentally responsible construction practices whenever possible.

Two new fire stations are being designed with “green” building practices to save energy and minimize negative environmental impacts.

In addition to national green building resources, the USGBC will provide local resources to the City through the Southern Colorado Branch of the Colorado State Chapter.

The City’s membership was initiated by the City’s “Green Building and Energy Conservation” subcommittee of the “Green Team.”

USGBC has more than 15,000 member organizations from every sector of the building industry and works to promote buildings that are environmentally responsible, profitable and healthy places to live and work.
